

SENTENCE PAIR TO PRISON FOR THEFT

Elkhart Men, Confessing, Ask Quick Action—and They Get It.

ELKHART, Ind., Sept. 21.—Confessing to charges of second-degree burglary, Frank Zilm, 19, and M. A. Harmon, 20, both of this city, were sentenced from Superior Judge William D. Hile's court, Thursday, to from two to 14 years in the Jeffersonville reformatory. They had expressed a desire to "have it over with as quickly as possible."

Zilm and Harmon were taken into custody Wednesday afternoon and by midnight had made confessions to the police of the robbery, Sept. 13, of between $400 and $500 from the Fidelity Savings store. A safe was removed from the store and carried in Zilm's car to the Camp bridge, two miles east of here, where it was broken open and robbed. In their confession, they named Joseph Nisum, aged 19, as their companion in crime, who the police are now seeking. Zilm's people have lived here for the past five years. Until recently Zilm was employed for a year and a half at the Studebaker plant in South Bend. Harmon obtained employment in a local factory a short time ago but previously, he told the police, he was a carnival employee. Nisum is told of having followed carnivals.

of the Blackford county stock sales pavilion, and B. Snell has been named vice president. The company operates the community sales pavilion here where farmers hold semi-monthly sales.

Greeks Appeal to U. S. Against Turk Scourge

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(By I. N. S.)—An urgent request for the churches of the United States to assist in saving the Christians surviving the "Kemalist scourge" in Asia Minor, was received at the Greek legation today from the holy synod of the Greek Catholic church at Athens.

Recounting the horrors following the occupation of Smyrna by the Turks, the holy synod requested that the cablegram be forwarded to all the leading churches in the United States.

Frankfort High School Held in "Gym" Basement

FRANKFORT, Sept. 21.—Five hundred sixty-three pupils have enrolled in the high school this year, an increase of 75 over the first day of last year.

School work is being carried on in basement rooms of the new gymnasium now under construction and in two temporary frame buildings near the gymnasium.

The city has been without a high school building since last winter, when the building which had been in use for more than 20 years was completely destroyed by fire.

"THE LONE WOLF"

pletely out of place in a room of that character.

But—this drew a frowning stare—there was a key in the lock of the middle door.

"There's such a thing as too much luck," Lanyard commended. "First the service gate and door, and now this ready to my hand—"

He swung sharply round and searched every shadow in the room with the glare of the portable lamp.

Placing the lamp on the floor and adjusting its hood so that it focused squarely upon the middle section of the buffet, he turned the key and discovered, behind the door, a small safe.

The combination dial was smug with ill-grounded confidence in its own inviolate integrity. Still Lanyard told it it could hardly be expected to know, it had yet to be dealt with by the shade of the Lone Wolf.

Amused by the conceit, Lanyard laid hold of the knob with steady, delicate fingertips that had not yet, in spite of years of honorable idleness, forgotten their cunning. The dial whirled, paused, reversed, turned all but imperceptibly, in three minutes he sat back on his heels, grasped the T-handle, turned it, had the satisfaction of hearing the bolt's slide back into their sockets, and opened the door wide.

But the racked pigeonholes held nothing to interest him whose one aim was the recovery of the Montalais jewels. The safe was, in fact, dedicated simply to the storage of documents.

"Love letters!" Lanyard mused with a grimace of weariness. "And each believed, no doubt, she cared too much to compromise him. Good Lord! what vanity is man's!"

He selected a pigeonhole at hazard, and emptied it of several bundles of letters, all neatly bound with tape or faded ribbon and clearly docketed. His eye was caught by a great name endorsed on the face of one of the packages, and reading what else was written there his brows rose high while his lips shaped a soundless whistle. Lanyard had kept such documents as gave her power over others. Lanyard wondered if it were possible he held in his hand an instrument to bend a woman to his will.

Suddenly he put out a hand and switched off the light, a gesture quite involuntary, simple reaction to the muffled thump of a chair overturned on the floor above.

Sounds of scuffling followed, as if Lanyard were dancing to no music with a heavy-footed partner. Then a groan.

His hands moved so rapidly and deftly that, although he seemed to rise without a second's delay, the safe was closed and the combination locked when he did so, the buffet door was shut and its key in his pocket.

This time Lanyard ascended the stairs without heeding what noise he made. Nevertheless his actions were never awkward or ill-timed; his approach was not heard, his arrival on the upper landing was unnoticed.

In an instantaneous pause he looked into the rose-pink room and saw Liane DeLorme. In a negligee like a cobweb over a nightdress even more sheer, kneeling and clawing at her throat, round which a heavy silk handkerchief was slowly tightening; her face already purple with strangulation, her eyes bulging from their sockets, her tongue protruding between swollen lips.

A thick knee was planted between her shoulder-blades. The ends of the handkerchief were in the sinewy hands of Albert Dupont.
